Hill Wootton

The Field has a history of failed planning applications and an appeal refusal, all of which state that the lane it is situated in is adjoining the settlement of Hill Wootton and does not constitute infill. The land in question has never been and is not regarded as infill. It is not a 'gap,' it is situated in an agricultural area which adjoins the main settlement and as such should not be included in the proposed re-drawn boundary.(see supporting evidence).

The access to the field from Leek Wootton involves a right turn across a dangerous blind bend.

The lane is the only access to a working farm and livery.

The piece of land satisfies the 5 essential purposes of the Green Belt and should remain within it.

'Spreading the burden' to this small hamlet in its rural setting is not a sound reason to allow planning.

Space for the proposed 5 houses could easily be found elsewhere. There is also scope for limited development within the settlement itself which would not compromise the Green Belt or the nature of the hamlet. What is the justification for destroying a unique Warwickshire hamlet in a rural setting, enjoyed and admired by many, when this is the case?
