I agree with the principles set out in 4.3 regarding the strategy for sustainably managed growth across a considerable number of villages. It is also a good idea to seek to provide a better balanced age structure where the proportion of younger citizens has declined.

However, I worry that the plan assumes that this growth across several villages will sustain marginal businesses and services. It may be too small to have an effect. More importantly, the allocation of dwellings to these villages should not go any further or it would be unreasonable to transform their nature by such diversion.
