Barchester Drive is too narrow for long and heavy plant movements during the construction phase. The bus already struggles to negotiate the traffic calming features, particularly with the presence of parked cars. They may also be obliged to use the grass verge and pathways, presenting a danger to pedestrians and destroying the established walkways and cycle paths.

The Oakland Farm site, which was under consideration as a traveller site, together with the remainder of that farm could be used for housing instead. However, as it does address the issues of access as the Birmingham road is not subject to traffic calming or children's play areas and is currently used by large commercial vehicles.
