Green belt land is that for a reason to keep "urbanization" from spreading so that towns ^{don't} join up. To "create" a "peri urban park" between Warwick Ori & Kenilworth is encroachment of Green belt. Even the cycle track lends itself to urbanization i.e. They can't use it at night because it is not lit, so lights go in; then the surface needs to become more weather proof & permanent Green belt needs to be kept; we might be lucky if H2 doesn't get built, but why are you so keen to destroy our environment. There are only 2 fields left between Kenilworth & Coventry M1.

Thickthorn

Kenilworth used to have a great deal of land for employment. eg Common Lane Dalehouse Lane, Clarendon Ave, but residential development was allowed to take it over, so now playing fields etc are being used not for a garden suburb, but high density housing along a "green lung" of the A46. With the intense development of Stoneleigh Park on A46 opposite this A46 "green" corridor will disappear. Warwickshire used to be known as the "leafy county" for how much longer??
